Made in 300 Ways

They fixed standards for every material. By countless new-day methods they made the soups more savory.

They recorded every step in a formula. So, when they attained an ideal soup, every future dish was like it.

Thus they made these prize French soups vastly more delightful.

They Won Prizes in Paris

Most Van Camp Soups are based on famous French recipes. Some of them won prizes in Parisian culinary contests.

A noted chef from the Hotel Ritz in Paris produced these rare soups in our kitchens—the very recipes which made French soups so famous.

But here those soups were dealt with in a scientific way. Culinary experts—men with college training—worked years to perfect them.

On a single soup they have compared as high as 300 blends.

LIEUT. GEORGE H. BENZ, ONE OF OLD 69TH HEROES, A VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

Was Member of the Evening World Staff and Well Known as a Writer.

Lieut. George H. Benz, member of The Evening World staff, formerly an officer of the 165th Infantry, New York's famous "Old 69th," died at 11.30 o'clock last night at the home of his parents, No. 219 Harry Street, Conshohocken, Pa.

A brief illness with pneumonia, against which his resistance was weakened by an experience of German gas in France, was the cause of his death. He had suffered for several days in New York at his bachelor quarters, No. 140 West 34th Street, but seemed better early last week and obtained the consent of his physician for a Christmas trip home. When his mother opened the door for him on his arrival he fainted and fell to the floor. From that time on his condition grew steadily worse.

Lieut. Benz went to France with his regiment and shared the hardships of that early period of American participation in the war. After his taste of gas he was incapacitated for further military service and was discharged. He seemed to recover, however, and from that time on his efforts were concentrated in Washington to obtain a renewal of his commission. He wanted to go to France again, and he kept up the effort until the day the armistice was signed.

Meanwhile he had joined The Evening World staff, where his first articles dealt with the story of the "Old 69th" going to France and getting into action. These articles were among the most vivid pen pictures of New York fighters that the war has produced. When he had finished the series he wrote many other articles for The Evening World, and was at work in this office a week before he died. He also wrote many magazine articles and stories in recent months.

Had he lived he would have gone to Houston, Tex., within a few days to become assistant managing editor of the Houston Post, where the climate, it was believed, might have benefited him.

He is survived by his father, mother, one brother and one sister.

HEROES WHO DIED TO SAVE COMRADES AWARDED CROSSES

Two Self-Sacrificing New Jersey Officers Honored for Distinguished Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—Heroic deaths of two New Jersey officers are recognized in Distinguished Service Cross awards announced to-day.

Capt. George S. Butcher of the 113th Machine Gun Battalion, who lived at No. 201 Bellevue Avenue, Upper Montclair, is acclaimed in this citation:

"Near Verdun, Oct. 27, hearing a call for help from a neighboring platoon of another company, whose men were all casualties, Capt. Butcher quickly made his way there, manned the guns and kept up a steady fire until he was himself killed by a shell. His action was purely voluntary, but realizing the necessity of opening fire immediately he disregarded his own safety in order to protect others, displaying the most heroic self-sacrifice."

The citation of First Lieut. Frederick J. Trestrail, 113th Infantry, who lived at No. 152 Virginia Avenue, Jersey City, reads:

"North of Verdun, Oct. 11, when the advance of his company was held up by terrific enflaming fire from machine guns, Lieut. Trestrail halted his men and with great coolness ascended a hill to ascertain the location of the enemy nests. He had barely reached the top of the hill when he was killed by an exploding shell."

Second Lieut. Walton H. Teneyck Jr., 96th Aero Squadron, No. 91 Rodney Street, Brooklyn, is cited for having, near Birquenay, Oct. 27, engaged seven enemy Fokkers while on a voluntary bombing mission. Although seriously wounded, he manoeuvred his plane so skillfully that his observer was able to drive off the enemy. In the combat his plane was struck by twenty-five bullets, some of which exploded the magazines of the observer's guns. In spite of his wounds and the damage to his machine he succeeded in landing safely on a strange field.

First Lieut. Delaney King, 108th Infantry, Buffalo, is cited for having, near Ronsoy, Sept. 25, although wounded early in the engagement, continued to lead his men until he received a second wound.

Heroes of the 33th Infantry cited included these:

Capt. Charles H. Sisson, Jacksonville, Ala.—Oct. 9, when the advance was checked on the outskirts of Conny because of the exhaustion of the troops and machine gun fire from the town, Capt. Sisson, who had been in action several hours, took charge without orders and started two patrols into the town. One was driven back, but this gallant officer personally led the other and succeeded in capturing two machine guns, with their crews, and 112 prisoners, completely cleaning out the town.

Lieut. Francis H. Mason—Near St. Georges, Oct. 22, led a patrol of forty men through a woods in order to envelop the enemy's position. Advancing under heavy fire, he was severely wounded, but continued the advance and succeeded in occupying the woods.

Corpl. Alvin C. York, Company G, 131st Machine Gun Battalion—Near Chateau-Chery, Oct. 8, after his platoon had suffered many casualties and three non-commissioned officers had been put out of action, assumed command and with seven other soldiers attacked and captured a machine gun nest, taking a number of machine guns and 132 prisoners, including four officers.

Private Albert B. Drawing, Company G, Carbury, N. D.—Near Chateau-Chery, Oct. 7, worked continuously for more than forty-eight hours without rest supervising a detachment of stretcher bearers searching the woods for wounded.

Other citations were:

18th Infantry—Lieut. Howard G. Smith, Cleveland; Sergt. Merl E. Clark, Webster City, Ia.
35th Infantry—Lieut. Harold A. Furlong, Detroit.
35th Infantry—Private Marcelino Serna, Chaparratus, Mexico.
341st Machine Gun Battalion—Private David Kline, medical detachment, Omaha.
60th Artillery, C. A. C.—Private Albert L. O'Connell, Battery C, Battle Creek, Mich.
